Tinley To Vote On High School Dist. July 11th

Cook County Superintendent of Schools Noble J. Puffer announces that a special election will be held July 11 to vote on the proposition of organizing a community high school district in the Tinley Park territory.

Following this article there will be found the report of the state Superintendent of Public Instruction on the proposition in which he states that from the facts submitted it is his opinion that the voters residing within the territory described in the petition are legally entitled to vote upon the proposition to establish a community high school district. As to whether or not it would be advisable to create a community high school district from the territory described in the petition is a question which the local voters will have to determine according to state Superintendent of Instruction John A. Wieland.

STATE OF ILLINOIS
Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Springfield, Ill.

June 5, 1942

Mr. Noble J. Puffer
County Supt. of Schools
Chicago, Illinois
Dear Mr. Puffer:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 21st, together with copy of a petition filed in your office petitioning you to call an election for the purpose of voting "For" or "Against" the proposition to establish a community high school district for the benefit of the inhabitants residing within the territory described in the petition.

In compliance with my duties as prescribed by Section 89c of the School Law, added by an Act approved July 17, 1941, I have studied the territory as described in the petition submitted and have prepared the report which follows as my opinion of the conditions which would result if such proposed community high school district were established:

The territory involved is rather irregular in shape, but in view of recent Supreme Court decisions (376 Ill. 64), I am of the opinion that the territory as described in the petition is compact and contiguous.

From the investigations that I have made, and from the statements contained in your letter, I find that the equalized assessed valuation of the proposed district exceeds $1,000,000, and the population of the proposed district to be in excess of 1500 as required by law.

From the statements as made in your letter, there are approximately 145 students residing in the proposed district and the equalized assessed valuation of the territory in the proposed district was $2,293,856.00 in 1940. With such an equalized assessed valuation and approximately 145 students, the district, if organized, should be able to maintain a recognized four-year high school without an excessive tax rate and should be able to provide adequate educational opportunities for the children in the territory involved.

From the facts submitted and available to this office, it is my opinion that the voters residing within the territory described in the petition are legally entitled to vote upon the proposition to establish a community high school district. As to whether or not it would be advisable to create a community high school district from the territory described in the petition, is a question which the local voters will have to determine.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) John A. Wieland

Mokena Property Owners Object To Drainage Cost

A meeting of property owners with the Village board of Mokena and Engineer Parish of the St. Ann Farm Drainage and Sales was held at the Village Hall Tuesday evening to discuss plans for drainage as affecting the south side of the village.

Engineer Parish presented a list of property owners and tentative estimates of percentage of benefits. Many objections were raised by the property owners against this on the grounds that the proposed percentage levies were not equitable. After a discussion it was finally decided that all the property owners who would be benefited by the proposed storm water sewer should be asked to make contributions toward the cost of the project amounting to approximately $4200. If the money cannot be raised in this manner then the only way it could be handled would be through the creation of a special drainage district which would have to be done thru legal court action.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Gaddis protested very strongly against the dumping of raw sewerage into the ditches and tiles in their section of town. From their reports it seems that many septic tanks and cess pools are not operating and are allowing raw drain water to escape. All property owners should make it a point to see that their septic tanks are in good operation for if this pollution of drainage ditches and tiles continues, the state will eventually demand the installation of a sanitary sewer system and treating plant as a measure of safeguarding the public health. Just how soon the matter of creating a special drainage district for the portion of the village affected by the drainage system mentioned has not been set.

Special Ceremonies to Be Held at Luth. Church Site in New Lenox

The corner stone of the new Trinity Ev. Lutheran church of New Lenox will be laid with appropriate ceremonies on Sunday, June 28. The service will begin at 3 o'clock and will be held on the church grounds. The Rev. Paul Scheer of Hinsdale, Illinois, will deliver the address and the Rev. W. J. Geffert, founder of Trinity Congregation, will lay the corner-stone.

The history of the church goes back to the evening of February 29, 1940 when the Rev. Mr. Geffert met with a group of ten people whom he had interested in the possibilities of a Lutheran church. As a result of that meeting the first service was conducted in the public school auditorium on March 10th. Thirty-four people attended this service. On March 31 a Sunday School was opened with an enrollment of 15 children. During the following months the numerical growth of the Mission progressed to a point where the thoughts of its members turned toward a permanent organization. Accordingly, on September 11, 1940 it was resolved to organize a congregation and to affiliate with the English Dist. of the Ev. Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states. The new congregation organized with 24 Communicants and 9 voting members. At the present time the congregation numbers 120 souls, 63 communicants and 15 voting members. The Sunday School has an enrollment of 57 children. A Ladies Aid was organized in 1941 and now has a membership of 22. Two Choirs, Junior and Senior, have occasions and plans are developing to organize these groups.

Any district organized prior to the effective date of the amendatory act a township high school district under Section 85 of this act or as a Community high school district under section 92A of this act, but which does not own its own high school buildings, may use its funds to pay the tuition of its pupils in other high schools.

It would appear from the above act which was approved July 21, 1941 that any high school district organized subsequent to said date would be required to have its own buildings.

In reply thereto I direct your attention to the school law, Illinois Revised Statutes 1941, Page 122, Paragraph 97C which is as follows:

It May Be 90 Degrees in the Shade— But Your Coal Bin Rates a Check-Up

Unnecessary Delay May Bring Hardships This Coming Winter

You can't say that you haven't been warned.

You can't say, when the leaves begin to fall, that you didn't have enough time to order your coal.

In another two months—at the most—it is going to be almost too late to get your coal supply. Then you won't be ready when the temperature begins to drop.

During the summer months, when homeowners formerly paid but little attention to their coal bins, there had always been a definite slump in coal production. The producers called the months the normal "off season" period.

This year, though, because of the high rate of war-time production—despite the lack of fuel purchasing by the home and apartment owners, large stores, and other commercial centers—the mines are now working at 90 per cent of capacity.

What lies ahead for those who have not purchased their coal during the off-season is easy to see. At the present time American industry has not, as yet, reached its full war-time capacity of production for Victory. Fall and early winter will see the nation at this peak period.

They'll Be Out of Luck.

Then, when industry is humming its song of death for Hitler and his stooges, if Mr. Jones, or Mr. Slopolk, or Mrs. Andy Tardie have not ordered their coal to keep the home fires burning, it is very probable that they are going to be out of luck. They'll probably have to spend some very miserable days until the coal they order LATE arrives.

Why so?

Here's why: Increased production to peak records in U. S. factories is going to require more coal. It stands to reason that if the mines are now working at 90 per cent of capacity (and industry has not yet reached its peak of production nor coal consumption), when the peak does arrive Uncle Sam is going to see to it that those industries get all the coal they want, as often as they want it, and no questions asked.

It is true that all will have to forego some former necessities and comforts until this universal war is won. But there is little reason to take on a hardship which is doing no one—even the nation's offensive for victory—any good.

By waiting until it is practically too late to order coal, most of which is then going to the factories, the home owner is deliberately harnessing himself with hardship—besides getting in the way of the nation's wartime progress.

Like a Slow Freight.

Those who delay ordering coal now for this coming winter may be compared to a slow freight train heading towards its terminal with a fast freight right behind it. The latter is delayed from reaching its destination on schedule. Your nation's victory efforts are all being carried on that fast freight train. The dilly-dallying, late-ordering home owner is the slow freight.

But don't forget: Uncle Sam is the dispatcher on that railroad. He's

These three miners are typically representative of those thousands responsible for the continuous flow of coal for the nation. There has been practically no "slack" season for them this year. The usual off-season period (summer months) for them was omitted because of industry's need for coal to carry on for the coming victory.

a good one, too. What he's going to do is shove the slow freight on to a siding and let the fast freight come on through.

In other words, those home owners and other consumers who haven't as yet ordered their coal supplies, may have to be sidetracked later this year in favor of Uncle Sam's more important business of winning the war. Cold feet now may result in even colder pedal extremities this winter.

The fact that peak production of American industry will be reached during the coming winter months isn't the only reason why you should be now getting your coal.

Even today the railroad yards, the river shipping docks and terminals

Oil Burner Conversion

The War Production board has acted to speed the conversion of oil-burning equipment to coal by permitting the assembly of small stokers from materials which were in manufacturers' hands on May 31.

At the same time, W. W. Timmis, chief of the plumbing and heating branch, announced the creation of an operations section which will continue an over-all study. This study of the various problems involved in the conversion of oil burners to other fuels has been under way for some time.

are jammed to capacity. Railroaders will tell you, with a touch of the Paul Bunyan spirit, that the rails just can't cool off. Rivermen will tell you that no sooner do the waves from one river vessel ease off on the beach, before another swell starts rolling in. When the peak is reached in production you can imagine what the thousands of home owners who wait "until later" to order their coal are doing to add to the groaning weight of traffic on the railroads, rivers and highways.

You owe it to your own comfort this coming winter, but especially to your nation out to win the gigantic struggle with Hitler and his partners, to make necessary provisions in advance.

Get It Now.

Despite the fact that bituminous coal production is now running over 11,000,000 tons a week, there is plenty of coal for all. The idea is to get it when it is now readily available.

During 1942, from 550 million tons to 570 million tons of bituminous coal, and 60 million tons of anthracite coal are required. The smaller portion of this amount is for home consumption.

Even if you have already ordered your coal, or intend getting it in during the next two weeks at the latest, you have not done your full bit to insure warmth for your home, or final victory for your country.

Check Heating System.

This is the time of the year—if ever—to see to it that the home's heating system is cleaned, inspected, and repaired if necessary.

Neglect now, during the summer months, can damage your home heating apparatus more than a winter season of hard activity.

Lack of ventilation in the basement, high humidity, condensation, or corrosion can soon play havoc with a heating plant. More than often it does, as shown by the short life of most smoke pipes which last only two or three years.

Improper operation, lack of maintenance, excessive stack losses, faulty distribution or circulation, overheating, infiltration, and needless heat losses waste 20 per cent of the fuel used in the average home. With the country at war, with extraordinary demands on transportation facilities, such waste is intolerable.

Coupled with the effect on health, lost time due to colds, absenteeism, etc., such neglect of proper maintenance and operation of the heating system becomes almost criminal.

Just as you check over your automobile periodically, or have some one do it, so too is it a good idea to have a competent heating man inspect your furnace or boiler.

If the average household gave its heating plant half the care it bestows upon the family car, the national fuel bill would be reduced many millions a year.

Coal mining is one of the nation's major industries.

The last available reports on the amount of coal mined show that over 51,887,885 tons of coal were prepared for consumption.

Chief soft coal producing states are Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois, and Kentucky. Anthracite (hard) coal is produced principally in Pennsylvania, around Wilkes-Barre and Scranton.

Coal Exports.

Coal exports amount to a sizeable figure, too. In 1940 (latest data available) over 16,456,928 tons were exported. The majority of the anthracite exported went to Canada.

Coke production, a coal by-product, also assumed gigantic proportions. Data shows that over 273,832,410 tons were produced in 1940. The gas from coke production is also used for fuel purposes.

Employment in the coal mining industry has declined ever since 1920. That year there were 784,621 persons employed. Ten years later (1930) there were 644,006 at work. In 1940 the number had further decreased to 543,200.

Crude Oil Production Increase.

Crude oil production in the United States, also, has steadily increased according to statistics.

In 1920 there were 442,929,000 barrels (42 gallons to a barrel) of oil drawn from the earth. Its value was $1,360,745,000. But the figures in 1940 were 1,351,847,000 barrels, valued at $1,352,000,000—a decrease in price.

The United States produced—in 1940—over half of the oil marketed. Russia was next in line with just slightly more than one-fifth of the United States total.

metal work, and pottery are shown for the many visitors.

There are architectural sketches by the late Whitney Warren, internationally known architect, and designs for tiles by William Morris, English poet and craftsman for whom the Morris chair was named. A rare pair of glazed pottery figurines of Belgian origin is also included.

Chased to Hospital

By Cranky Cranked Car

WICHITA, KAN.—Thayer Nelson cranked his car.

It was in reverse, and backed rapidly down the street. Nelson chased the car—and was gaining ground. The runaway machine crashed into another car, causing the gear shift to switch into low. The car chased Nelson—and caught him. He's in a hospital now.

Female Justice Being Meted Out

Drain on Manpower Brings Women Into Jury Box.

PITTSBURGH.—"Female justice" is being meted out in the courts here because of the war's drain on manpower.

Jury boxes are predominantly feminine, with most of them being filled by panels that are at least three-fourths women. All-women juries, once the nightmare of legal traditionalists, are becoming increasingly common in Allegheny county courts.

The men are being excused wholesale from jury duty because they are needed in the district's many defense plants.

"The courts are very ready to excuse men these days who hold national defense jobs," one judge explained.

Opinion in courthouse circles is that the women, in most cases, are efficient and conscientious jurors, except that they are inclined to be "soft-hearted."

"Often women are reluctant to return a verdict carrying a heavy penalty," a spokesman from the district attorney's office said. "In murder cases, it's difficult to get them to send the defendant to the chair."

Although the women jurors are easy on defendants in criminal cases, they make it much tougher for the defendant in the civil suit as a rule, one attorney remarked.

He explained the women are inclined to award large damage verdicts, which cannot always be sustained in higher courts.

The women are more severe than men in morality cases, it was said, and are often at a loss in cases connected with business or stock transactions.

Girl Cuts Off Man's

Leg Under Locomotive

RICHMOND, VA.—The saga of an attractive girl intern who crawled beneath a locomotive, held a flashlight in her teeth and amputated the leg of a railway workman with a borrowed pocket knife was disclosed here.

Heroine of the story was Marina Diez-Rivas, slender, young brunette from Puerto Rico, who has been on the night ambulance-riding assignment at the Medical college of Virginia hospital.

A call came from the railroad yards. Trapped beneath a locomotive, groaning and half-delirious with pain, was a yard employee. A big wheel was squarely across his mangled leg.

There was only one way to free him—amputation—and there was only one way to get at it—from underneath the locomotive.

Shivering as the night wind cut through her white uniform, Miss Diez-Rivas crawled under. Lying flat on the gravel, grease and ashes, she went to work by the dim rays of her flashlight with a small hospital scalpel.

Heavy muscle and the cramped quarters presented a problem. The scalpel wasn't enough. In desperation she borrowed a big pocket knife and finished the job.

The patient is recovering.

Dig Nine Days to Free

Mule Trapped in Mine

BOULDER, COLO.—Miners cut and dug in round-the-clock shifts to rescue Teddy, a tough, hard-working mule imprisoned nine days ago by a cave-in in the Crackerjack Coal mine.

Joe Robertson, the mine lessee who has worked with only snatches of sleep since the cave-in to free Teddy, half of his two-mule coal-pulling power, said Teddy was the "best-working doggone mule I ever saw."

Working steadily now with four-man shifts in the small mine tunnel, Robertson hopes to dig through about 80 feet of fallen rock and debris to reach little Teddy.

William B. Wheeler, state humane society officer, said, "They told me Teddy can get water where he's trapped at the back of the mine and they told me, too, that similarly trapped mine mules have chewed the bark off the mine supports for food."

Finds It Isn't So Easy

To Give Away Pet Lion

SEATTLE.—Sven Hagenstrom discovered it isn't so easy to give away a lion—after two attempts.

First he generously proffered the sturdy cub to an army unit as a mascot after a court had ordered him to part with the pet on complaints of the neighbors. But, he explained, "something came up, and the army couldn't keep her."

Then Tacoma's Point Defiance zoo came to his rescue and made room for Hagenstrom's pet.

Working All Day With Beautiful Girls His Task

Stunning Blondes, Brunettes Tumble in Profusion In Man's Office.

NEW YORK.—In the spring—or any other season—a young man's fancy is apt to turn toward a job like Harry Conover's. That is, a job where one is surrounded all day long by some of the most beautiful girls in the world.

Tall and stunning blondes and brunettes tumble about the Conover office in distracting profusion. As a visitor once remarked: "These are the kind of girls I like—you should see the kind I get."

Conover is the head of the model agency bearing his name. His stock in trade consists of 250 lassies, all of whom have two things in common: they are young and pretty. He also has some 20 phones and these ring almost constantly as photographers, artists and advertising agency executives seek the services of one or more of his models to help sell a refrigerator or stove or beautify the cover of a magazine.

He Was a Model.

In these surroundings it would seem all but impossible to concentrate but Conover can apply himself to desk work as though he were a hermit. It is quite obvious that he is accustomed to beauty.

"I married a model," he said with a wistful undertone as though he would like, once in a while, to see a homely girl.

As a matter of fact he is not a bad looking chap himself, only 29, and once one of the most successful male models. "They used to call me 'The Face,'" he admits. Friends tagged him thus because his pearly teeth and curly locks were plastered over billboards and in magazines as bait for toothpastes and hair tonics.

A moment of meditation made Conover a model magnate. He realized abruptly one day that every picture he posed for meant that he was one step closer to the end of his modeling career. So he spent his spare time helping other models get work—and incidentally establishing good contacts for himself.

His method of getting his business under way was quite unorthodox. No matter who called him for a model got the answer that the Conover agency was all booked. This went on right to the verge of bankruptcy, but Conover rightly figured that the word would get around that he was doing great. It did and he did.

Likes 'Scrubbed' Look.

Conover's models look a little different from most. When he got into the field they were standardized as tall, thin with china-white faces and a disdainful air. He looks for girls who have what he calls that "scrubbed" look. Give him such with the proper height, features and figure and she can make herself from $75 to $300 a week.

Jinx Falkenberg is one of his models and while he didn't name her he sometimes tags odd nicknames like "Dusty" on his girls. Best ages for a model are 16 to 25 and best heights 5-5 to 5-11. He gets most of his applicants for jobs on Monday and this puzzled him until he discovered that ambitious suitors would spend Sunday telling the girls: "You ought to be a model." This apparently replaces "You ought to be in pictures."

Suit of Boy Friend Now

In Army Adorns Steno

DENVER.—The slack suit blonde Fayette Sanford wore to her job in the Colorado Capitol definitely was mannish looking.

It had been her boy friend's new sport suit until he went to the army. "He can't wear it for the duration, and it was a good looking outfit, so I had it made over for myself," explained Fayette, state welfare department stenographer.

Her example impressed a friend, Mrs. Frances Karkeek, civil service commission stenographer.

"My husband is going to the army soon," she said. "He won't be able to say anything if I want to have his civilian pants cut down."

Judge Splits a 'Fee'

For Traffic Violation

PORTLAND, ORE.—Cupid got Mrs. Elizabeth Andrus into trouble, and then helped her out of it.

She told Judge A. E. Wheelock she was hurrying to get a young couple to the marriage license bureau, so her husband, a minister, could marry them, when she was halted for traffic violation.

"How much did your husband get for marrying the couple?" asked the judge. When told that the fee was $5, the judge decided to "split" an original fine of $5 to $2.50.

Judge Fines Speeding

Father, Then Remits It

TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.—"You probably couldn't have been much use at the hospital," City Judge C. A. Bailey told Elmer A. Ihler, who offered the alibi to a speeding charge that he was hastening to attend the birth of his first son.

The judge imposed a fine of $5. As an afterthought, he remitted the fine and told Ihler to save the ticket to show his son some day "just how much trouble he got you into."

Saviors of the Flag

WHEN a press dispatch carried the news recently that an army captain and three enlisted men had braved heavy Japanese fire to restore the American flag atop a 100-foot pole on siege-bound Corregidor, it sent the editorial writers scurrying to their history books to look up the name of a soldier who performed a similar heroic deed during the Revolution. So the story of the defense of Fort Sullivan, during the month of June, 1776, was old again and once more Americans were reminded of one of their almost-legendary heroes.

He was Sgt. William Jasper and beside his name in the annals of America are now written, as "saviors of the flag," the names of Capt. Arthur E. Huff of St. Louis, Mo., Corp. Louis A. Roark of Gypsum, Kan., and Privates Roy O. Bailey of Kansas City, Mo., and Harley H. Leaird of Durant, Okla. For their feat at Corregidor they were awarded the silver star decoration. What their fate has been is unknown at the time this article is written, for Corregidor no longer flies the flag which they rescued. They may be prisoners of the Japanese, or they may have died gloriously in that last battle, just as did Sergeant Jasper in his last battle.

Jasper was born in South Carolina about 1750 and soon after the outbreak of the Revolution enlisted as a sergeant in the Second South Carolina regiment, commanded by Col. William Moultrie. Early in June, 1776, when a British land and naval force under Sir Henry Clinton and Admiral Sir Peter Parker appeared off the Carolina coast to invest Charleston, Moultrie was trying to complete a fortress on Sullivan's island at the mouth of the harbor.

On the morning of June 28 five ships of the British armada sailed in close to the unfinished fort and opened a furious fire. Moultrie had only a limited supply of ammunition, so his return fire was very light compared with that of the enemy. In the midst of the bombardment a shot struck the staff from which flew the South Carolina banner—a blue flag, with a crescent moon in the upper corner—and it fell to the bottom of the ditch outside the entrenchments. A great cheer went up from the British men-of-war when they saw the patriots' flag go down.

But the next moment Sergeant Jasper had sprung from an embrasure, seized the flag, tore it from its shattered staff and tied it on to the staff of a sponge which he had been wielding as he helped serve one of the guns of the fort. Then he sprang back to the parapet and, amid a hail of enemy fire, supported it there until another flagstaff had been secured to take its place. And above the roar of the cannonade could be heard the cheers of the Americans acclaiming the sergeant's deed!

All day the battle raged fiercely with the Americans conserving their ammunition and making every shot tell upon the hulls or the rigging of the British ships. Only one of the guns of the fort having been dismounted, the enemy's fire began to slacken and that night the attack was abandoned.

In recognition of his brave act, Sergeant Jasper was presented by Governor Rutledge of South Carolina with his own sword. The governor also offered him a lieutenant's commission but Jasper declined the honor because he could neither read nor write. However, Moultrie was so impressed with his daring that he gave the sergeant a roving commission and allowed him to select six kindred spirits to carry out raids against the British.

Jasper proved to be a successful partisan leader. His daring career came to an end on October 9, 1779. During the assault on the Spring Hill redoubt in the attack on Savannah by the American and French forces, led by General Lincoln and Admiral D'Estaing, Jasper was mortally wounded while attempting to fasten the regimental colors to the parapet. A square in the city of Savannah and a county in Georgia perpetuate his name.

William Moultrie, his commanding officer, was destined to have a longer and more distinguished career. In commemoration of his bravery in defending Fort Sullivan, the fort was later named Fort Moultrie. Soon afterwards he was commissioned a brigadier general in the Continental army and placed in charge of military affairs in Georgia and South Carolina where he repeatedly distinguished himself in battle against the British and Tories. In April, 1779, he again saved Charleston from being captured by a British force under General Prevost.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: In order to save Norland Airways from bankruptcy Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Cruger, has bought a plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen while Slade is away. Suspecting that the disappearance of the plane has something to do with Frayne, Slade returns to where he left the swan-hunter, only to find him apparently doing nothing but hunt swans. There is no trace of the plane. That leaves Slade with only one clue, the "devil bird," or "ghost" plane which the eskimo, Umanak, first heard and which appears to come from Echo Harbor. On his way back to report to Cruger Slade stops to see his old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, and learns that the gas cache he keeps near their cabin has been robbed. Now he and Cruger are talking and Slade is outlining his plans.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XI

Slade's first impulse was to proclaim that he'd be looking for a ghost plane.

"All right," Cruger said out of a prolonged silence. "You win. Give that Anawotto country the once-over. We're going bust anyway, the way things are."

Slade's lips thinned with resolution.

"I'm going to find that Lockheed," he affirmed.

Cruger remained unimpressed.

"When do you start?" he inquired. Slade disregarded the note of mockery.

"As soon as I have a look around this burg," was his slightly abstracted reply. "And then a look around McMurray."

"For what?"

"To find a friend of mine," was Slade's unexpected reply, "who got hurt in a fight—Slim Turnstead."

"I didn't think you played around with camp bums," said Cruger.

"What's your fighting friend got to do with this trip into the Anawotto?"

"I don't know yet," was Slade's quiet-voiced reply. "But it's going to help a little to know just where he's hanging out."

The cabin on the Kasakana, nestling between its shoudering hills, stood a place of peace as the sun mounted high above the spruce ridges and the spoonbills and waveys fed in the water shallows.

But that air of peace departed once Zeke Pratt had rolled out of his wall bunk and reached for his scarred old larrigans. From one of them, he saw, a lace was most unmistakably missing. He squinted about the floor boards. Then he groped and grunted about under the bunk end. Then his narrowing gaze centered on his camp-mate, whose smile was bland as he busied himself slicing sowlably for breakfast.

"You took my shoelace," you Judas-souled old skillet-swabber," was Zeke's indignant accusation.

"What'd I want with your shoelace?" demanded Minty, edging away until he stood at the far side of the cookstove.

"You wanted it enough to swipe it from this here larrigan," charged Zeke. He dropped down on all fours to inspect his companion's shoe-packs. "And she's there, wrapped around your scrofulous old shin-bone."

"She ain't," piped Minty. "You gimme back that lace o' mine, or d'you know what I'll do? I'll call it quits for keeps. I don't aim to do minin' work with a human polecat who robs a camp-mate in his sleep."

"And I'm sure fed up with tryin' to live peaceful under the same roof with a rattlesnake in larrigans."

But by the time they had eaten, the hurricane had blown itself out. They were forlornly dependent on each other, in their isolation, and they knew it.

"Meat's gittin' lower'n I like to see it," ventured Minty as he hung up the flour sack that served as a towel. "S'posin' you finish up the strippin' on that new dike while I go scoutin' for a day or two."

"What'll you scout for?" demanded Zeke, secretly disturbed by the thought of being alone.

"Spotted a buck out by that old caribou crosstin' yesterday," said Minty. "Reckon I'll go after him."

He had, he knew, a second reason for that excursion out over the northern ridges. He had a hankering to nose about a bit and find out what might be bringing an outsider's plane into that district of theirs.

Minty was too good a woodsman not to spot his landmarks and blaze an occasional spruce or jackpine as he pushed deeper and deeper into the broken country north of the Kasakana. He went on, hour after silent hour, encouraged by a showing of deer tracks and spoor. But he got no glimpse of his buck.

What most occupied his mind, as the sun lowered and weariness overtook him, was the problem of finding a comfortable place to make camp. And he had the needed wood and water, he discovered, when he came to a loon-paunted lake lightly fringed with spruce. He stoically made his fire, cooked his supper, and ate his bannock and bacon, washed down with strong tea. Then, fighting his pipe, he sat watching the wild fowl on the lake water.

To the silent watcher, a moment later, came a sound that was neither a throb nor a drone, a far-away sound that grew stronger as he listened. Peering north, where a belated sun still hung red above the horizon, he caught sight of a plane. It was flying low, growing bigger as he watched. It showed dark, at first, against the evening light. But as it came closer and veered a point or two into the wind it became a framework of ghostly white, heeling down in the lake and slowly losing headway on the ruffled water.

The hungry look was still in her eyes. But the world had come back to her.

Minty, blinking at the pallid wings, realized the ship was both bigger than Lindy Slade's Snow-Ball Baby and different in outline. It floated higher on the water, and gave the impression of being bobtailed, as it drifted slowly in toward the shoreline where the spruce groves met the water.

Then Minty rubbed his eyes and blinked harder than ever. For, before he quite knew how or when, the plane had disappeared from sight.

Minty, who didn't believe in miracles, decided to look into what had all the aspects of a miraculous disappearance. He smothered his fire and rolled up his worn old four-pointers. Then he took up his rifle and quietly rounded the southerly arm of the lake, making it a point to keep as well under cover as possible.

But no sign of life, as he stopped from time to time, stood revealed to him. He seemed so alone in a world of twilight emptiness that he felt to wondering, as he pressed on, if his old eyes had been playing tricks on him.

Then he stopped short, arrested by the sound of voices.

"Why'd you have a fire on the other side of the lake?" one of these voices inquired.

"I had no fire," a more guttural voice responded.

"But I saw it as I came down," maintained the other. "And if you advertise this layout you'll last about as long here as a snowball in hell."

"I had no fire," was the stubbornly repeated protest.

Minty's first impulse was to creep a little closer. But on second thought he dropped behind the ridge and circled back through the scattered spruce boles. He noticed, as he traversed the valley that led to the neighboring ridge, how the timber had been cut away to leave a rough trail that led lakeward.

He also noticed, as he skirted this second ridge, that its black-rocked surface was scored and seamed with shallow trenches, as though a prospector had been stripping and searching for color there.

Minty stood thoughtful a moment and then made his way higher up the sloping hogback that terminated in an abrupt cliff end at the water's edge. He crouched low as he went, for the cover thinned out as he ascended. But he could no longer hear voices. That troubled him a little as he moved forward to the crest of the divide. From there he could see how the lake bluff merged into a darker tangle of timber. And that timber, he saw, was a man-made canopy of spruce boles. It was an arbor-cave into which the wings of a plane could slip and lie concealed. And under the casually woven cover that arched the narrow harbor between the rock-shouderers he could make out the pallid outlines of his vanished airplane.

A tingle eddied through him as he discerned a roughly made landing platform close under the plane wings, a landing platform on which he saw a double row of ore bags. They stood there filled and tied, as though waiting for transport.

Minty's anxiety for a better view of those ore bags prompted him to move to the upper peak of the ridge. He hesitated about advancing down the open slope. And as he hesitated a sudden blast of sound broke the quietness.

He knew it was a gunshot, even before he felt the force of the bullet. The impact of that bullet, tearing through the blanket folds within three inches of his ear, twisted his startled body halfway around and sent him tumbling along the rock slope. He lost possession of his rifle as he fell. He kept on rolling and bounding down the long slope until his body collided with the underbrush that fringed the valley bottom. From the ridge top he heard a triumphant voice call out: "I got him!" But his one impulse, at the moment, was to put distance between him and that unknown sniper. He crawled into the underbrush, grateful for the thinning light that was paling to semi-darkness. He wormed forward, seeking always any deeper cover that offered. He went on until he came to a stony cross gully quartering off to the left. Once in this he scrambled to his feet and ran forward, stooping low as he went. When he spotted a spruce grove on his right he dove into it, emerging on a slope of glacial hardheads along which he dodged from shadow to shadow.

He neither stopped nor rested until he had mounted a second ridge and lost himself in a second scattering of stunted timber. There, panting and wheezing, he sank down behind a ridge of granite.

But there was still peril, he felt, in that neighborhood. He pushed on through a sludgy bed of tules, crossed another timbered ridge, and came to more open country. There he studied the stars, made sure of his course, and began fighting his circuitous way back toward the camp on the Kasakana. When tired out he slept. When the sun wakened him, he ate and went on. The second night he slept for an hour or two, and then pushed doggedly on.

The sub-arctic light of morning was returning to the land when Minty reached the shack. Zeke, he found, was still asleep in his wall bunk. He awakened him with a shout tinged with bitterness.

"Your days o' peace is over, you pillow-lovin' old profligate. There's goin' to be war in these regions."

Lynn was restless and worried. For the third time in half an hour she crossed to the door and scanned the pearl-misted skyline that stretched away to the south. She told herself that she was merely watching for a familiar blue plane with weathered wings, a plane with the Flying Padre at the controls. But her thoughts, as she did so, were on another plane, an equally weathered plane known as the Snow-Ball Baby.

Her week of watching over old Umanak had persuaded her that she was not equipped for solitude. She turned back to her patient when she saw Umanak lift his white-swathed head in an attitude of listening.

"Devil-bird come," he muttered. A moment later Lynn herself heard the familiar bee-hum of a distant motor.

"That's the Padre," she said as she ran to the door. A moment later she was hurrying down the slope to the waterfront.

But the long-legged figure that emerged from the cabin was not that of the Flying Padre. She brushed back her wind-blown hair to see Alan striding toward her.

He must have caught the surge of joy that swept up to her eyes, for he stopped abruptly and stood studying her upturned face. He did not speak. But his own eyes darkened as he detected the look of hunger in the questioning hazel eyes resting on his face. He groped for her hand, with his heart pounding. Then he took her in his arms.

She roused herself and forced her quickly breathing body free of the encircling arms. The hungry look was still in her eyes. But time and the world had come back to her.

"What is it?" he asked, conscious of the firmness with which she was holding him away from her.

"I've a patient there," she reminded him, pointing to the knoll-top surgery.

Slade strode after her as she moved up the slope. He remembered about old Umanak.

"How is the old boy?"

"That's what I'm waiting to find out," Lynn explained. "Everything looks all right, but, of course, I can't tell. Father'll be here, any time now, to take off the bandages."

"Will he be able to see?" Slade asked. "I mean Umanak."

"If hoping helps any," answered Lynn, "that old hunter will be following a dog team again before long."

Slade arrested her in the doorway.

"I may be out of a job earlier than I expected," he said. (TO BE CONTINUED)

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

ALCOHOL FACTS VERSUS DRINKING PROPAGANDA

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 21:17; 23:32; Isaiah 5:20-23; Hosea 4:11; Joel 3:2, 3; Ephesians 5:18. GOLDEN TEXT—If sinners entice thee, consent thou not.—Proverbs 1:10.

The facts are on the side of the one who opposes the liquor traffic, and they are so plentiful and so devastating that the industry does not care to face them. Their "best bet" is to use propaganda so skillfully prepared as to disarm the reader. If the propaganda is truthful, it is only because it has to be, and only in that measure.

Our lesson suggests several points in the liquor propaganda, each of which we can prove to be untrue.

I. They Say, "Enjoy Life, That's What We Are Here For" (Prov. 21:17).

Consider the ads of the liquor trade. They carry the beautiful lady, the brilliant young man, the socially correct surroundings, riches, ease, etc. They suggest that even the grandmother in the home approves the use of intoxicants to bring comfort and pleasure to the breadwinner in the home.

What is the truth? Man is not here for pleasure; he is here to serve God. History demonstrates that the nation that lives for pleasure, especially in connection with the use of intoxicants, is doomed to extinction.

II. They Say, "Liquor Is Not Dangerous" (Prov. 23:32).

It is presented as a pleasant and harmless stimulant, when in fact it is known to science, to police and social welfare workers as a narcotic which not only upsets digestion and deranges physical processes but, most vicious of all, "affects personality by its action upon the certain specific brain area. It disturbs, confuses, slows down, and removes the restraints, the checks and balances which make a well-rounded personality. It is the highest functional level of the brain, the personality level, which is first put into eclipse by the action of alcohol." (Carson Taylor).

III. They Say, "Those Who Oppose Liquor Are Fanatics" (Isa. 5:20, 21, 23).

The prophet answers that claim by pointing out that those who favor the use of alcohol are the ones who call evil good and good evil, etc. A little study of liquor propaganda as it appears in the advertising of the industry soon demonstrates that fact. Of late they have been trying to convince us that beer is just a soft drink for the home. Any policeman who has seen a man drunk on beer, and any social or religious worker who has seen the destruction it has wrought in the home and in society, knows that is not true.

IV. They Say, "Strong Men and Leaders Are Drinkers" (Isa. 5:22).

Sadly enough, many of our leading men do indulge in liquor, but if the truth were out, it would be known that they are less capable as leaders and weaker men for their use of it. And who has not seen a leader become a poor dervish by the alcohol route, or a strong man become a jittery mental, moral, and physical wreck in the same way.

The work of a nation in both war and peace is done by sober, steady, trustworthy men who have a "clear head," not because they use a certain whisky but because they do not use it.

V. They Say, "The Pleasure Is Worth Price" (Hosea 4:11; Joel 3:2, 3).

The wicked ones who captured Israel felt they made a good trade when they gave a boy for a harlot, or exchanged a girl for wine. The modern system of making merchandise of boys and girls is not as openly crass as that, but when you figure the cost of alcohol to our land, be sure to add in the girls who have gone into iniquity by the way of tavern hostesses and the boys who have lost everything sacred because of "booze."

Remember too that the beer makers are deliberately using this way to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men—their future customers—and we are letting them get away with it, right in the army camps.

VI. They Say, "Drinking and Religion Go Well Together" (Eph. 5:18).

The contrast of Paul gives that claim the direct brand of falsehood. Being drunk with wine is the exact opposite of spirituality.

Liquor interests know that if church members can be led to believe that wine at dinner, beer as a soft drink—and an occasional social cocktail—is not incompatible with religious life, they will have effectively shut the mouth of the opposition they fear the most—the church.

Let pastors and church boards deal plainly and drastically with drinking church members, and the church will profit spiritually, and and again become an effective means of stemming the tide of social iniquity which is engulfing our nation.

MOST quilts today are planned as bedspreads and have a color scheme to harmonize with other decorations. If a variety of figured scraps is used one color is generally repeated in each block to give the design unity.

The beauty of any quilt is enhanced if it is set off with a valance around the bed. The bed in the sketch had no particular tradition and the footboard was much too high to display the quilt to advantage.

CARL WILLIAMS is a telephone company "trouble shooter". That's a job that's tough and plenty dangerous. Mr. Williams says: "I've got to be alert and on my toes every minute I'm working. What's a musical comedy got to do with winning a war?

PLENTY! We're building an army of men—not machines. And men have minds. And minds need freshening... change... relaxation.

So one of the biggest undertakings of the USO is its sponsoring of free entertainment, through the cooperation of the movie and theatrical industries, at army camps, naval bases—wherever the fighting men of the USA go to train or dig in.

USO Camp Shows, Inc. is actually the biggest single theatrical enterprise the world has ever seen. It books 264 shows for the boys every week, which play to an average nightly attendance of 50,000.

It contacts movie stars, theatrical headliners, big name bands and their leaders. It routes all these... plans their itinerary... arranges the most convenient times when soldiers and sailors can take time out to sit and be entertained.

For it realizes that the one great advantage of the American fighting man is his ability to think for himself, to make the most of any situation, to fight as a liberty-loving individual.

And this is one of his great differences from our enemy.

To help carry on the all-important work of maintaining the morale of our fighting forces, the USO needs your help... it needs your contribution.

Your dollar has many demands on it this year. Many of these demands must be met—others deserve to be met. And among these latter, the plea of the USO for whatever sum you can contribute merits your earnest consideration.

For we have a war to win, and the USO is directly concerned with the men who must—and will—win it.

Dig deep—for the men who are digging in!

Send your contribution to your local chairman or to USO, Empire State Building, New York.

Dear Mrs. Rogers:
I received your letter and certainly appreciate it. I've already mailed the card you so kindly enclosed, but presume it will arrive with this letter. Yes, I'm getting the Times regularly and surely appreciate it.

Regarding what I would like to receive, I promise not to be bashful Cookies, candy and cigarettes are always welcome by soldiers every where. I'm afraid I'm no exception. Unfortunately, our regulations here prohibit wearing sweaters, so I'm sorry to have to say I couldn't accept one. Confidentially, we could certainly use them these continually cool mornings, but the commandant says no.

I'd like to ask you for a sewing kit if I may. It would certainly solve a few problems such as buttons, emblems and occasionally ripped clothes. Haven't received last week's Times but I guess it's in the mail somewhere. Often our mail is delayed. Have been going to school for several weeks now learning meterology, code mathematics as applied to navigation and various other subjects concerning Army and Navy organization and war tactics and technique. Most interesting of the classes is naval identification, where we learn to distinguish ships of various types and nationalities so we won't sink one of our own as the Italians have done on occasions. That must have been embarrassing to them as well as unfortunate. I'll guarantee that our flyers won't do anything like that! Every nation makes mistakes, but our country's record is exceptionally clear, especially in this war. We learned a lot from the last war and from early stages of this one, and have put our learning to excellent advantage. Further, just as they say in the Board of Trade and in the grain business, you learn something new every day. That reminds me, I wonder if George Yunker and Al Brandau remember Al from Rosenbaum Brothers truck desk. I used to handle their accounts and a lot of others including my next door neighbors Mr. Wortman, and John Johnson also on South Sayre Ave.

What's the truck delivery price of corn now at Calumet Elevator, I wonder. Since being here and so separated from civilian life, I'd nearly forgotten that I used to buy grain from my neighbors. I'm sorry. Sometimes wonder what things will be like after the war. Rather soon to think of that I guess. Goodness knows, we've a hard long row to hoe now. Yes, it'll be a long and difficult war and an unpleasant war while it lasts, so dig in folks, we know you're backing us up very well.

From the serious to the pleasant. Regarding the USO., the Santa Ana local chapter provides dances and entertainment for cadets every week. I've attended and have had a very enjoyable time. As far as the National organization is concerned, I really couldn't say. Our recreational facilities are many and varied, but their source I don't know. Some were from local interests some provided thru cadet fees and some from the Air Force organization, that much I know however. I'd imagine that the USO is very active here, I know that in Los Angeles they have a large center.

Well, Mrs. Rogers and friends and folks I have to study and I've plenty of it, so until I hear from you again, I'm appreciating you very much. Best regards to the fellows in Service and my friends back there. "Keep 'Em Flying".

Very sincerely,
Allan Boner

Dear Friends:
I received your letter a few weeks ago and received the package the other day. I sure appreciate all that the Citizen's Committee is doing for us boys in service. I also receive the Tinley Park Times every week and sure enjoy reading all the home town news. I spent some very enjoyable hours while off duty with Mr. and Mrs. Al Hartwig while they were here in Denver on their vacation a few weeks ago. It was sure good to see some folks from Tinley.

We have a swell USO here in Denver. They have a number of dances over the week end and arrange for sight-seeing and skiing trips to the mountains; dinners in Denver homes and many other forms of entertainments.

Thanking you again for all you are doing for us, I remain,
Sincerely yours,
Prt. Fred Meyer,
850 Ord. Co., Lowry Field, Colo.

Citizens Service Committee:

I have received your most welcome gifts which I appreciated very much, and each and every article comes in very handy and I want to compliment you on making such swell cookies which I and my buddies enjoyed.

The way you folks are backing us up sure helps a lot, and I would like to congratulate you for your splendid work and I think that every man who receives gifts and such thinks the same as I do.

There isn't anything else to say except that just as long as the flag stays on the flag pole in Tinley that ours will wave forever.

Again I sincerely thank you.
As Ever,

Dear Friends:

I should have written sooner, but I reckon I just didn't get around to it. I'm not making any excuses, I just plead guilty. Since my last letter my address has changed. Its the same as it was before I went to Camp Pakora. Just in case you haven't got it, here it is: P. F. C. Oscar E. Olson Co. L, 14th Inf, Fort Davis, Canal Zone.

I want to thank all you folks for all the things you have sent to me, and especially for sending me the Tinley Times. I enjoy it very much, and always look forward to the next issue. I especially enjoy reading the letters of the other boys in Service.

Sincerely yours,
PFC Oscar E. Olson

Dear Citizens Service Committee
Friends of Tinley Park:

I received the package from the Citizens Service Committee and want to thank you very much for it, the package was very useful to me.

I am still here at Sears Landing which is sort of a small island along the coast.

Something which interested me yesterday was to see a fisherman who was fishing along the coast here hook a small shark with his hook and line. After putting up a terrific fight he finally landed the shark.

When he was dead we examined his mouth and after seeing his perfect and sharp upper and lower teeth we all agreed that we didn't want to be in any water where there are sharks.

I am still receiving the Tinley Park Times and find it very interesting to see where all the old home town boys are at.

PFC Elmer Steinborn, Co. G, 111 Inf., Sears Landing, Camp Davis, N. Carolina.

Dear Folks:

I received your cigarettes and razor blades. Thanks a lot. I've been a little slow in writing but now that we graduated from school I should have more time.

I'm flying every day now and really enjoying it. We have new students coming in all the time and I guess from now on we'll really be working.

Say I'm only 100 miles or so from L. A. and I have weekends off.

If you would send Bob Funk's address I would like to go and see him.

Also anyone that is stationed here on the coast. Be sure and send their correct addresses and I will do my best to find them. Thanks alot.

To Whom it may concern:

Received your package this morning. I cannot begin to express my gratitude. It was one of the pleasant est surprises I've had since entering It shows that although we men are away for a while we are not forgotten.

Also I'd like to say Thanks a Million for the weekly edition of the Tinley Park Times. It certainly is nice to read what is going on back home.

I imagine it will be news to some of you that I am no longer in San Diego. I have been transferred to Texas A & M College in College Station, Texas where much to my surprise I met Walter Niedringhouse, also of Tinley Park, who is studying Radio here too. We are kept quite busy here with our studies and training. Speaking of studies reminds me that I must close now and resume my classes.

Once more I must compliment you on the wonderful work you are doing and I'm sure with a spirit such as yours at home we cannot help but to keep "Old Glory" out on top.

Sincerely,
Pete Hass, A. S.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 21.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens" (Prov. 8: 19).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else." (Isa. 45: 18).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, God, has created all in and of Himself. Spirit is the only substance, the invisible and indivisible infinite God. Things spiritual and eternal are substantial. Things material and temporal are insubstantial" (p. 335).

GREETINGS TO OUR NEIGHBOR TOWN

Tinley Park Observes First Home Coming This Week

Lone Indian Called On Tinley Settlers In 1844

When early settlers came to the Tinley Park territory almost 100 years ago, they did not find many Indians.

However, Mr. and Mrs. John Fulton, grandparents of Bert Fulton and Mrs. Lulu Rogers of Tinley, often related that when they came to this section in 1844 one lone Indian used to call at their home. He was quite an old man and could not speak English, but used the sign language and thus made himself understood.

One day when he called at the Fulton home he tapped Mrs. Fulton on the shoulder and pointed about the place and finally he saw a bowl of sour milk and he dipped his finger in the milk and then pointed to his mouth. Mrs. Fulton recognized what he wanted and gave him the milk. The old Indian was no moocher, for when he went on a hunt he shot a deer and brought the hind quarters of venison to the Fulton home.

The old Indian suddenly stopped coming to the Fultons. It was not learned just what did become of the old red skin.

There are traces thruout the Tinley territory of the Indians by way of arrow heads, stone hatchets and Indian mounds in some of the woodland in this section.

An Airplane Plant Was Begun In Tinley 25 Years Ago

During the last world war, Tinley Park had visions of becoming an airplane manufacturing town, when a man by the name of Goodall started to build a plane in the old Washing machine plant now used as a mushroom raising plant.

After many months work the plane was ready for a trial flight, but the plane fell to earth after a brief flight and the air craft building venture ended. Above is a picture of the plane mentioned.

Old Mill Was Interesting Landmark

For many years Tinley Park had a very interesting landmark by way of an old mill which formerly stood where the Hartman dwelling north of Tinley on Oak Park avenue now is located.

This mill was built on the style of the mills of Holland and was erected in 1872 by George Bartels and was in use for about 20 years for grinding wheat. The mill had long fan like arms so arranged as to catch the wind which created the motive power to turn the grindstones. The mill depended entirely upon the wind for power and often times the millers would work day and night while the wind was blowing.

Saenger Hall Built 85 Years Ago

The Tinley Park Saenger Hall building now occupied by the Saenger Hall Tavern of which genial Charles Hollwedel is the proprietor, was erected by Carl Vogt, brother of the late Henry Vogt Sr., in 1857 and this week the 85th anniversary of this hall is being observed. The picture shows the original Saenger Hall which was located upstairs over the tavern. The grove adjoining the hall was known as the "Linden Gardens" named so because of the linden trees which grew in the grove.

Henry Vogt, Sr. operated the Saenger hall and also opened a store in this building and in 1888 erected the present Vogt's Dept. Store, at a cost of $14,000.

Over 40 years ago the present Saenger hall was built and the old site of the first Saenger hall was converted into living rooms.

Among the proprietors who operated in the years gone by we find Henry Brodthun, John Brookman, Carl Funk, Dick Bruening, Wm. Martenson, Blume & Scharf, F. Blume, C. Funk, Sippel & Sippel, P. Schwab, George Lorenz, Norman Hansen, Edward Jagla and the present proprietor, Charles Hollwedel.

For many years the Linden Gardens was the only picnic grove in this section and great crowds used to attend these affairs.

Saenger Hall got its name from the German singing societies which abounded in the early days. Tinley Park had a singer group and they used to sing with the Blue Island Saenger Verein.

The first Tinley Park Home Coming and the observance of the 85th anniversary of the hall will be celebrated in the grove adjoining the hall. Fourteen organizations of Tinley Park are taking part in the celebration and will have concessions on the grounds. In addition there will be all kinds of rides and amusements. The opening of the festivities open tonight and will be carried on Saturday night and will be climaxed with a huge parade of floats, bands, drum and bugle corps, etc. on Sunday afternoon commencing at 3 p.m. After the parade the festivities and dancing will continue at the hall and grove for the rest of the night. Every one is heartily invited to attend this big double event.

The Saenger Hall is in constant use for various events and occasions.

Funk's Store Housed First Tinley Telephone Office

The picture above shows how the J. C. Funk store on Oak Park Avenue in 1901 when Mr. Funk who is still operating a store in the same building, first opened his merchandising establishment. Note the old horse and buggy and the wooden sidewalks and steps. The street running west from Oak Park Ave., along side of the above building was not opened until John M. Rauhoff laid out his subdivision many years later.

The structure pictured was erected by Christian Andres Sr. in about 1869. The present brick block south of the Funk store was built in 1906 by Mr. Andres and was known as the "Andres Block" and was purchased by Henry J. Bettenhausen about two years ago.

The building pictured housed Tinley Park's first telephone and later the first telephone central. About 1898 the present Bell Telephone Co., known as "The Chicago Telephone Co." ran their first line thru here from Blue Island to New Lenox and the first telephone was placed in the J. C. Funk store and was quite a curiosity. Only a few business places in Chicago and Joliet could be reached. There were no other phones in this section. The store customers were very timid at first to speak over the newfangled contraption, but some of the more aggressive citizens delighted in speaking to "Central" in New Lenox. Some of the people had an idea that the voice traveled thru a hollow wire.

A little later, a drive was put on to obtain local telephone subscribers and the first local directory had seven subscribers listed, among them being C. Goesel and Jake Funk. Then a switchboard was installed in the Funk store and was tended by Mr. Funk and his clerks. The board was only used during the day-time. Later as more subscribers were added and the switch board grew in size, a 24 hour service was inaugurated and the switch board was moved up stairs in the living quarters of Mr. Funk and his family. Mr. Funk served as manager. Later Mr. Funk moved from the store to the residence he now occupies.

Miss Viola Wilke became the local telephone manager after Mr. Funk's resignation and continued in this capacity for many years until the present automatic telephone system was installed. The Tinley Park telephone central was located in the same building for 38 years and during this time only had two managers.

Mr. Funk succeeded Henry Andres in the store business. Dan Rogers one time operated a barber shop in the small addition to the store as shown in the above picture. When Mr. Rauhoff opened his subdivision the present street was opened-up and connected with Oak Park Ave., the buildings along the north side of the store building were removed.

produce the photo Mr. J. C. Funk so kindly loaned us.

Old Landmark

The building occupied by Edward Henke's Feed Store, is one of the oldest buildings in Tinley Park. At one time the Tinley Park Post Office was located there when Mrs. C. W. Bishop was postmistress.

Celebration Recalls Early Days of Tinley

For the first time in its history Tinley Park is having a three day home coming this week, namely Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, June 26, 27 and 28. Naturally an event of this nature brings back memories of the old days and of the beginning of the community.

Away back when Chicago was just beginning to grow into a city, pioneers came from the eastern states to the west in quest of cheap land and an opportunity to better their conditions.

Along in the early thirties and forties pioneers came to this section and purchased land for $1.25 per acre. Today the same land has either been subdivided or else as farm land is worth ten times more than the original purchase price. The newly opened territory around Chicago was all prairie land and government owned and was sold direct to the settlers by the government land office.

Along in 1844 John Fulton and his family came from New York state and located on the present Fulton homestead at the north edge of what is now Tinley Park. Mr. Fulton had been engaged in the dairy business in the Empire state previous to locating here.

Other settlers, mostly Irish and English came and soon a settlement sprung up in what is now Orland township but which at that time was called, "The English Settlement." Later many German settlers came and with the building of the Rock Island railroad in 1852 Tinley Park came into being. At first the village was named "New Bremen" presumably in honor of Bremen, Germany from which port many of the German immigrants sailed.

Upon the completion of the Rock Island three brothers came to this section, Sam, Charles and Edward Tinley. Sam Tinley was the first Rock Island station agent in Tinley Park and served in this capacity. His brother Charles was a conductor on the old Peru accommodation train and was in service for many years. After retiring from railroading Mr. Tinley retired and resided in Chicago. He died a number of years ago and was brought back to this section for burial. The third brother, Edward was station agent at Minooka for many years.

Bert Fulton's parents resided on the same farm which Mr. Fulton's grandparents first settled on and the present Mr. Fulton's father while still a small boy saw a Mr. Clark come out from Chicago in 1847 and stake out a site for the first public school in Tinley Park. The site was near the present Saenger Hall. Shortly afterward a school house was erected and Miss Laurenda Evenden was the first school teacher. Her people came from New York.

When this little school had outgrown its usefulness it was sold and a portion of this building was incorporated into the present Tinley Park Village Hall.

The Fulton family has been prominently identified with the founding and development of the Tinley Park territory. Mr. Bert Fulton, the grandson of the pioneer John Fulton is at present the President of the Tinley Park Board of Education and also served on the Tinley Park Village Board for 14 years.

Time and space prevents us from giving a more comprehensive outline of the history of Tinley Park, but we can only sketch few of the high lights of the local history.

John Keigh was the first postmaster, this being previous to the coming of the Rock Island railroad. After the Rock Island was built Dick Kettle erected the building now occupied by the Royal Blue Store. Mr. Kettle conducted a store, tavern and also was postmaster.

In 1869 Christian Andres, Sr., built the building now occupied by the Siemens Implement sales. Mr. Andres conducted a store for a number of years which was later taken over by John Thornworth who later sold the place and moved to Worth and then to Aurora. Later C. Goesel who had founded Goesselville north of Tinley Park bought the place and engaged in the farm implement business.

Mrs. Mary Wyman operated the first millinery and dress making establishment in Tinley Park. This was about 70 years ago.

The first blacksmith shop was opened on the present site of the Hirsch Funeral home by James B. Madden an Englishman, was born on the Isle of Man. His daughter Beatrice later married Joseph Fulton Christian Andres, Sr., operated the first grain elevator and a horse power was used for power.

George Schreiber opened a shoe shop in Tinley Park over forty years ago and still is engaged in the shoe repairing business. Mr. Schreiber came from Pennsylvania and at first was located in Goesselville. Mr. Schreiber served as rural mail carrier for that section.

Vogt's Dept. Store Founded In Saenger Hall

The Vogt Dept. Store in Tinley Park was founded by Henry Vogt, Sr., and was first located in the present Saenger Hall building. In the latter part of the eighties the present brick store building was erected and was operated as the Bremen Cash Store. Mr. Vogt, Sr., also served as postmaster for many years and later his son Henry also served as postmaster.

In later years the present owner, H. C. Vogt, made a modern up-to-the minute department store which is the largest mercantile establishment in Tinley Park and in fact is so much like a city store, that it would do credit to any city.

This store was conducted for 45 years by Mr. Vogt, Sr., who retired from active business in about 1912 and since then his son Henry C., has been running this business which has all told served the Tinley Park community for better than 75 years.

Both Sisters Over 90 Years Old

Among the old time residents of Tinley Park are two sisters, Mrs.

Henry Vogt, Sr., widow of the founder of the Saenger Hall, and her sister, Mrs. Wm. Siekman. Mrs. Vogt shown to the left of the photo just recently observed her 90th birthday while Mrs. Siekman has passed her 93rd birthday. Both sisters are still active and able to be about and take much interest in the events of every day life.

Thru the efforts of Dr. C. W. Bishop the village of New Bremen was incorporated and re-named Tinley Park in 1892. Henry Vogt, Sr., was elected the first mayor of Tinley Park.

Along in the early '70's Tinley Park had a vision of becoming a railroad junction point when the Decatur Air Line railroad right of way was surveyed thru here. Carl Vogt, feeling that the village was on the verge of a "boom" built a brick hotel at a cost of $20,000. The structure now occupied as a flat building, was located at a point where the proposed Air Line was to have junctioned with the Rock Island. Soon after the big Chicago fire in 1871, the proposed Air Line was abandoned when its promoters suffered irreparable losses and were forced to quit. Thus ended Tinley Park's dream of becoming a railroad town.

In 1880 the present Zion Lutheran Church was erected in Tinley Park, but the Tinley Park Methodist church was built on a lot donated by Christian Andres, Sr.

In 1904 a boom struck the village when the Spiral Manufacturing Co., was organized and a factory was built on the east edge of the village for the manufacture of the Spiral Washing Machine. The concern was capitalized at $250,000. The factory was built at a cost of $12,000.00.

After a few years operation the concern went out of business and later the structure was used for various purposes and today is in use as a mushroom raising plant.

In 1907 John M. Rauhoff, inventor of "Ironite" a water proofing used in cement, erected a factory west of town which has been very successful and is still in operation. Mr. Rauhoff was the father of our present Postmaster, Paul Rauhoff.

Tinley Park has always had enterprising business men. Long before the Public Service extended their electric lines thru this section, Tinley Park enjoyed electric lights and power. In 1909 local business men organized a local electric light company and erected a plant at a cost of $5,000. This plant was in use up to the time it was sold to the Public Service Co. a few years ago.

Tinley Park has made rapid progress within the past 20 years and is now one of the most progressive communities in So. Cook County.

In our 2nd Home Coming issue next year we will present more interesting local historical sketches.

IN MEMORIAM

KNIPPLE—In fond and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Raymond J. Knippel who left us so suddenly fifteen years ago, June 29, 1927.

Imprinted deep upon our minds
And stamped upon our hearts,
A vision of your face we find
That never will depart.
We cannot banish you from sight;
In our minds and hearts it seems
Your face comes stealing thru the night

Invading all our dreams.
In all our thoughts you find a place,
No matter what we do
Or say, it seems we can't erase
The Memory of you.
The wound is as deep
And hurts as much today,
As it did fifteen years ago
When you passed away.

Boyer's Woods Most Scenic Spot In Tinley Park

The most beautiful scenic spot in the Tinley Park community, is the beautiful woodland of 45 acres owned by Mr. John Boyer. This natural beauty spot of vales and hills has been beautified within the last ten years by Mr. Boyer who built an artificial lake utilizing a former creek and river bed. The lake is ideal for swimming and rowing and is 15 feet deep at the center. The above picture gives an idea of the beauties of this charming woodland.

Mr. Boyer created sand beaches by having several carloads of sand hauled in. An ever-flowing spring feeds the lake, which is always supplied with fresh water. There is no chance for any stagnant water, as the water drains out of the lake, while the fresh water enters.

The rustic setting about this body of water, is just ideal, and this limpid pool looks like a big mirror in which is reflected the trees and bushes growing along its shores.

Mr. Boyer has planted over 500 trees of various kind. There are myriads of lilac bushes and during lilac time, the blooms present a most entrancing sight and the air is laden with the sweet scent from these fragrant blooms. Mr. Boyer has created trails, rustic steps and bridges, the latter spanning some quite deep ravines.

This woodland evidently was once a hunting ground of the Indians. There is a huge dark granite boulder on a mound, supposed to mark the last resting place of an Indian chief. The rock is covered with lower's initials carved into the rock. Many dates are also carved thereon, one being, 1881.

This nature-lover owner, has stocked the lake with a good supply of fine fish, and the grown-ups, as well as the children, delight in "feeding the fish" by tossing bits of bread on the water, which immediately attract schools of the swift little fish. Often, these fish will dart right up on the sand of the beach trying to grab a bread morsel and with a quick flip, bounce back into the water.

Mr. Boyer has erected a modern summer home in this woodland, and at present, a number of aviators of the United Air Lines are staying there.

This being private property, Mr. Boyer does not allow the general public in this woodland, but reserves the use of it to his friends and relatives.

The woods are composed of a fine variety of trees including hickory, oak, fir, maples, etc.

Recently surveyors for the proposed new tri-state six-lane highway advised Mr. Boyer that the proposed route will take off about 300 feet from the east end of the lake. The reason this spot was chosen, is because the highway can be run underneath the Rock Island tracks as there is a high track embankment at this point, and it is said, it will be cheaper to build a subway, than an over head bridge. Just when this new highway will be constructed has not been revealed.

There are few communities in this section which can boast of as fine a scenic beauty spot as the Boyer Woodland is.

Enlist Your Coal Bin For the Duration

Estimates agree it will take 100 million EXTRA tons of coal this year to provide power for war industry and transportation. Coal must be moved in a steady, near-capacity stream if needs of homes and war are to be met.

It means bins must NOT be filled as usual in late summer or fall—or the problem of supply will surely become acute. It means your winter fuel should be ordered and stored NOW—while a surplus over war needs exists.

Do this and you aid a serious task. You benefit from a minimum price, the best of service, a choice of the exact, high-value coal you prefer. So this week, enlist YOUR coal bin for the duration!

Tinley Man Inducted Into Domain of Neptunus Rex

J. M. Wilson of Tinley Park who crossed the equator on the ill fated air craft carrier Lexington in Feb. of this year, has sent the following interesting papers "back home" regarding his induction into the sea fraternity after crossing the equator:

Subpoena and Summons Extraordinary

THE ROYAL HIGH COURT OF THE RAGING MAIN Region of the South Seas Domain of Neptunus Rex, SS. To THOSE WHO MAY COME THESE PRESENTS.

GREETINGS AND BEWARE

WHEREAS, The good ship LEXINGTON, bound southward of the Equator, is about to enter our domain; and WHEREAS, the aforesaid ship carries a large and loathsome cargo of landlubbers, beachcombers, guardrats, sea-lawyers, lounge lizards, parlor-dunigans, plow-deserters, par-bench warmers, chicken-chasers, hay tossers, four-flushers, cross-word puzzle bugs, bridge sharks, shieks, asphalt arabs, and other foul creatures of the land, falsely masquerading as seamen; and WHEREAS, THE ROYAL COURT OF THE RAGING MAIN will convene on board the good ship LEXINGTON, on the sixth day of February, 1942, at Latitude 00°00'00" Longitude (deleted by Royal Censor), and

WHEREAS, our Royal Scribe has checked the ship's roster on the aforesaid LEXINGTON and finds therein the body of "J" M. WILSON, Seal, U. S. Navy, a vile and loathsome Pollywog who has not acknowledged the sovereignty of the Ruler of the Deep.

THEREFORE: We Neptunus Rex, Lord of the watery Wastes, Ruler of the Raging Main, and by our own grace, King over all who sail the seas do summon and command that the body soul and person of the above mentioned Pollywog duly appear before my Royal Judges as a humble supplicant with chastened mien to answer the heinous charges which have been leveled against him and in order that pains and penalties commensurate with his awful crimes may be duly adjudged. Investigation as to his fitness to become an initiate into the EXALT-

ED ORDER OF SHELLBACKS will thereupon be conducted.

CHARGES

1. In that you have heretofore pusillanimously failed to render the homage due the Royal Person and Court of His Majesty NEPTUNUS REX, and further, have willfully and maliciously neglected to submit your vile and lowly person and scurvy soul for initiation into the mysteries of our Exalted Order of Shellbacks and are therefore and thereby a miserable landlubber and loathsome pollywog.

2. Falsely masquerading as a sailor.

3. Throwing degrading and threatening remarks in the direction of his Royal Person, loyal subjects of his Domain and for all good they stand for.

Disobey this Summons Under Pain of Our Swift and Terrible Displeasure. Our Vigilance is Ever Wakeful, Our Vengeance is Just and Sure.

GIVEN UNDER OUR HAND AND SEAL

NEPTUNUS REX

GREETINGS:

KNOW YE: That on this 6th day of February, 1942, in Latitude 00°00'00" and Longitude (deleted by Royal Censor), there appeared within Our Royal Domain the U. S. S. LEXINGTON, Mighty Aircraft Carrier of the United States Navy, bent upon a secret mission of war to seek out and exterminate all the arrogant Rising Sons and their Piratical Cohorts who, because of their unwarranted and dastardly crimes against the loyal subjects of His Majesty, Neptunus Rex, are considered unworthy of becoming even lowly Pollywogs in the Kingdom of the Seven Seas.

BE IT REMEMBERED: That the said Vessel, and the Officers and Crew thereof, have been inspected and because of their fine spirit and eagerness for the fray, have been passed upon by Ourselves and OUR ROYAL EQUATORIAL COURT.

Therefore, Be It Known: By all ye Sailors, Mariners, and Landlubbers, who may be honored by his presence, that

J. M. WILSON, SEA I/C by his special qualifications has been found worthy to be numbered as One of Our Trusty Shellbacks and has been gathered to our fold and duly initiated into the SOLEMN MYSTERIES of the ANCIENT ORDER OF THE DEEP.

BE IT FURTHER UNDERSTOOD: That by virtue of the power vested in me I hereby command my subjects to show due honor and respect to him whenever he may enter Our Realm.

Disobey this order under penalty of Our Royal Displeasure. Given under our hand and seal this Sixth day of February, 1942.

SUGAR STAMP NO. 4 VALID

Sugar stamp No. 4 is valid until June 27, 1942. After that date No. 5 will be valid for the purchase of two pounds but for a period of four weeks instead of one pound for two weeks, as in the past. This will extend the life of the book, thus reducing labor for the clerical force of the Rationing Office and will also afford relief to the grocers inasmuch as he will have fewer stamps to handle.

Institutional and Industrial sugar users may apply for their allotment between June 20 and July 5. Office hours are 8:30 to 5:00 and until 12:00 on Saturday. At this time they will be allowed two months supply in place of one month as previously.

Conservation Dept. Will Have Exhibit at Monee Fair

The educational wildlife exhibit of the Illinois Department of Conservation will be one of the feature free attractions at the Monee District Fair, to be held at Monee July 2 to 5 inclusive.

Livingston E. Osborne, Director of Conservation has announced that the display will be bigger and better than ever this year, with more live animals, snakes, and birds on exhibit for the entertainment and education of the public. The exhibit is under supervision of the Division of Education and Public Relations, Francis X. Lueth, Dept. Biologist, who managed the show which was received with enthusiasm by the people the last two years, will be in charge of the exhibit.

Assorted specimens of live Illinois snakes, including the poisonous varieties, will again form an important part of the Department's traveling show. Live fur-bearing animals, all natives of Illinois, will include foxes, skunks, raccoons and opossums, wild live game birds, including ring neck pheasant, fancy pheasant and bob white quail also will be displayed.

The exhibit will include live hawks and owls, and a display of mounted fish from Illinois waters, among them a crappie weighing over three pounds, and a 30 pound flathead cat fish. The Department of Conservation's Division of Forestry also will exhibit in the show.

"The primary purpose of the exhibit is educational," Osborne said. I am convinced that the ultimate goal of every conservationist cannot be attained without public cooperation. We can receive that cooperation only through an intelligent, well directed educational program.

"The sportsmen know the value of conservation education," Osborne affirmed. "I hope every hunter and fisherman in the community will take this opportunity to visit the Department of Conservation's wildlife exhibit, and to urge his friends and neighbors to do likewise."

Magic for Your Meals—Berry Jams
(See Recipes Below.)

Time for Jam

With the arrival of the fruit and jelly season, you homemakers will want to make the most of these garden products for winter use. This year it is doubly important for you to can fruits and jellies wisely, as this will help you not only in conserving the nation's resources, but also assure you of delicious accompaniments to your meals during cooler weather.

Since sugar is used in canning not only as a sweetener, but as a preservative, the government will allot five pounds of sugar per person, in addition to what you receive in your ration, so that you will have sugar for canning.

Ripe Raspberry Jam.
(Makes 10 6-ounce glasses)
4½ cups prepared fruit
6 cups sugar

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 2 quarts fully ripe raspberries. Remove some of seeds by sieving part of pulp, if desired. Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Jam takes slightly less sugar than jelly, and you will work an economy by making use of the fruit in addition to the saving on sugar.

Ripe Blackberry Jam.
(Makes 11 6-ounce glasses)
4½ cups prepared fruit
6½ cups sugar

To prepare fruit, grind or crush thoroughly about 2 quarts fully ripe blackberries (not black caps). Sieve about ½ of ground or crushed pulp. (For Spiced Blackberry Jam, add ½ to ½ teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon, and allspice, or any desired combination of spices.)

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire, adding powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: The status of tin available for commercial canning has at last been clarified, and now we know exactly what will be available to use by way of canned goods.

The "Big Four" in canned vegetables, peas, tomatoes, string beans and corn, plus asparagus, pears, peaches, evaporated milk and fish will be allowed unlimited amounts of tin for canning purposes.

"Secondary" products such as spinach, beets, cherries, berries, applesauce, grapefruit, sausage, luncheon meats, beef and others will continue to be canned, but they will be allowed only the same amount of tin as used in 1940, with some exceptions having more or less.

Foods packed last year will last until fall at least, and the goods packed this year will be available even before last year's are gone. There's no need to hoard.

Your Jam Shelf

*Ripe Raspberry Jam
*Ripe Blackberry Jam
*Sliced Strawberry Jam
*Spiced Ripe Peach Jam
*Cherry Relish
*Recipe Given

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

Sliced Strawberry Jam.
(Makes 10 6-ounce glasses)
4½ cups prepared fruit
7 cups sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, cut about 2 quarts fully ripe strawberries in halves lengthwise; cut large berries in quarters. Measure sugar and prepared fruit, solidly packed, into large kettle; mix well. Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes.

Remove from fire and stir in bottle fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

Spiced Ripe Peach Jam With Brazil Nuts
(Makes 11 6-ounce glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit
¼ cup lemon juice
7½ cups sugar
1 cup sliced Brazil nuts
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, peel about 2½ pounds fully ripe peaches; pit and grind or chop very fine. Add ½ to 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and allspice, or any desired combination of spices, to ground or chopped peaches. Squeeze juice from 2 medium lemons. Slice Brazil nuts very thin. Add to fruit mixture.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, filling up last cup with water, if necessary. Add lemon juice and mix well. Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

Relishes are excellent to serve with meats of any kind for they give the meal added zest. Here's a recipe for a real sugar-saver:

Cherry Relish.
2 cups pitted cherries
1 cup seedless raisins
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ cup honey
½ cup vinegar
¾ cup pecan nutmeats

Mix all the ingredients except pecans and cook 1 hour, slowly. Add pecans and cook 3 minutes longer. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal at once.

Sugar Substitutes.

If you feel that you cannot use sugar in all of the canning recipes given here, even with your extra ration, here are the rules for substitutions:

If you are using a bottled fruit pectin recipe, you may substitute ½ cups light corn syrup for 2 cups of the sugar. Do not use more than 2 cups of corn syrup in any recipe, however, as this will give unsatisfactory results.

In a powdered fruit pectin recipe, you may use 1 cup light corn syrup for each cup of sugar omitted. But, do not try to use all corn syrup in the recipe instead of sugar. You may substitute corn syrup for only ½ the sugar required. If, for example, the recipe calls for 6 cups of sugar altogether, you may use 3 cups of light corn syrup, but you must also use 3 cups of sugar.

Why get hot and bothered over your cooking and household problems when you can get expert advice on them? Write, explaining your problem to Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

LONG, LONG AGO

The old man sent his son down to the village for some tobacco, but the lad did not return. Weeks, months, and years passed. Then one day a huge limousine drew up outside the father's cottage, and the son, richly dressed, got out.

"Well, father, here I am!" he cried. "I went to America, worked hard, and made good. I guess I'm worth a few thousand pounds today."

The old man thumped his stick angrily on the ground. "That's as may be," he snorted; "but what I want to know is where's my tobacco?"

Retort Precise

George Bernard Shaw, attending a benefit affair, asked a dowager to dance. As they waltzed, she simpered, "Oh, Mr. Shaw, whatever made you ask poor little me to dance?" Replied the gallant G. B. S.: "This is a charity ball, isn't it?"

Grouchy—Poke me in the back with that umbrella again and you'll find yourself there in no time!

Candidate

"Pa, maybe I might be President some day, huh?"
"Sure, sonny, you may."
"But how will you feel if I get defeated?"

But They Won't

"What's the matter, parson?"
"I was just wishing that people would struggle to get into Heaven like they struggle to get into society."

OUT OF PRACTICE

"There's no doubt, the wise thing is to practice economy."
"But this is an extravagant age and we seem to be out of practice."

Landlord

"Freddy, the landlord says he is going to raise the rent."
"I'll never pay it."
"I think he wants to get rid of us."
"Does he? Then, of course, I'll pay it."

Even Senators Can't

War Forces Business to

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

WASHINGTON. — Announcement that the crew of a certain U. S. naval vessel had "celebrated" their third sinking of their ship by the Japanese radio since last December 7 illustrates the extraordinary lack of information about losses—and some victories—in this war in the hands of the public.

Probably in no war in history has there been more rumor and less information.

There is no comparison whatever with the situation which existed in the last war, although dispatches could be sent just as speedily then as now, and every government was trying, in one way or another, to use propaganda for its own ends and prevent the propaganda of the enemy from having the effect the enemy desired.

The chief reason for all this secrecy in this war of course is high strategy, which exists to an extent and on a scale never before dreamed of.

Let's consider the matter of the battle of the Coral sea. The United States government up to the moment this is written has not admitted the loss of anything more than two planes in that battle. Jap claims as to our losses have ranged until they finally counted a battleship as well as two airplane carriers and numerous smaller vessels.

'Connections' Mean Nothing

All sorts of people with all sorts of connections have tried to find out what really happened to our ships in that battle.

While there is general acceptance of the statement by Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the Japanese claims were "fantastic" the thought of most of the inquirers has been that we did lose more than two planes, and probably some small surface craft.

The inquiries have been made in some instances by important administration senators who had close friends on ships in the southwest Pacific.

Remembering the case of the cruiser Houston, which was not admitted to have been sunk until weeks after the Japanese announced it, and from which not a single officer or man, as far as we have ever learned, was rescued, these senators, worried about their friends, have tried to find out as to the safety of certain other ships.

The senators in question failed to discover even whether the ships in which they were interested had participated in that engagement!

This is not written in criticism, but in commendation. It is unfortunately true that if the senators had learned the truth the information would not have died there. Within a few days the scraps of information would have been pieced together.

A check-up of estimated losses inflicted on the enemy obtained from that enemy's capital is pretty nearly priceless in guiding future operations.

It isn't only the military and political leaders who have to make decisions involving vital gambles on what may or may not happen.

Industry is up against the same thing, and even the little business man has to make up his mind on courses of action which may lead to losses if things break one way or other.

Building Management Faces Difficult Decision

Take the matter of a big office building in Washington. This building has three furnaces, which have burned oil to supply heat and hot water ever since the building was constructed.

Now the building management is ordered to cut down its consumption of oil by 50 per cent (the first order was for only a 25 per cent reduction).

Now it would be comparatively simple for the management to let the building be cold next winter, and tell the tenants it was sorry, but a temperature of 55 degrees, or whatever should prove to be possible, was the best it could do.

Actually the building management COULD do precisely that, for the tenants would not be able to find other quarters, Washington being so crowded.

But naturally the management is scratching around, trying to find some way to soften the blow. It figures it can save only 12 to 15 per cent at the maximum, without producing hardship.

So now it is considering putting in coal stokers, IF it can get the stokers—for at least one and possibly two of the boilers. Being a downtown office building it can not pile up a stock of coal, as can the regular householder with a cellar. Its cellars are much occupied.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidney fails to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood. You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
